ABSTRACT

A method and system are disclosed for determining the source or sources of a relatively high amount of traffic into a first set of nodes from another set of nodes. In one example, the top talker sources among a first set of nodes are found. Any top talker sources, which are from another set of nodes are determined, and an alert is produced which indicates the top talker sources to the network manager.